Editors are seeking a well-written, well-argued paper, normally presented at the regional meetings. The paper should give evidence that the author has a good command of the research related to his/her topic. The paper should have a clear thesis statement, and arguments or evidence should support the position taken by the author. The paper should make an original contribution to the field and not just summarize previous positions. Footnotes/endnotes and bibliography should be cited in proper form according to the SBL norms.
