ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

No major project, whether it is rebuilding a wall, a temple, or a community, is achieved by one's efforts alone. This book is no exception. I am grateful for the support and guidance of many others. I thank, first and foremost, Danna Nolan Fewell, who sharpened my thinking and provided invaluable guidance for this entire project. I have benefited in countless ways from her insights, her critiques, her wisdom, and her encouragement. Otto Maduro introduced me to the work of Pierre Bourdieu, which opened the biblical text to me in new and, I believe, ethically important ways. He kept me honest with my use of theory and always returned work to me with an encouraging comment even while facing his own serious health issues. Jon Berquist provided much needed guidance on current scholarship on Persian period Yehud as well succinct and helpful advice on writing a more polished work. Thanks are also due Kenneth Ngwa, who graciously read my manuscript, asked thoughtful questions, and provided helpful insights during our discussion. Thanks also to Thomas Römer and the AIL editorial board for their willingness to take on this project and especially for their helpful feedback on the manuscript. Likewise, I appreciate the questions and feedback from scholars at SBL's Ezra-Nehemiah-Chronicles and Social-Scientific sections, where portions of this work have been read and discussed. Thanks are also due the Ramat Raḥel archaeological team led by Oded Lipschits, with whom I spent the 2009 and 2010 seasons. The time with them enriched my understanding of the physical space in which the events of Ezra-Nehemiah took place and provided help in understanding the published results of fieldwork. A special thanks to Ido Koch, who led the team in area D3. I am deeply grateful for the work of the SBL editors who went over this work with a fine-tooth comb and saved me from many errors and made this book a reality. Finally, I would like to thank my spouse, John Laird, for his support. He has sacrificed much for the completion of this project. Yet his encouragement never failed, even when he was compelled to hear me discuss, yet again, my current stage of progress. I could not be more grateful. The final result is better for the aid of all these people. The shortcomings are all my own.
