Acknowledgments

This volume has been over three years in the making, and I have accrued many debts along the way. I must begin by expressing my deepest gratitude to my colleague, mentor, and friend, Martien Halvorson-Taylor, with whom I co-organized the conference at which these essays were first presented. "Books and Readers in the Premodern World: A Conference in Honor of Harry Gamble" took place at the University of Virginia on April 16 and 17, 2015, sponsored in large part by the Page-Barbour Fund. It was a truly energizing time of intellectual exchange. I am grateful to the many colleagues who lent their support to that event, especially Ahmed al-Rahim, Elizabeth Meyer, and Janet Spittler, who graciously chaired sessions. Marc Michael Epstein, Bruce Holsinger, Andrew Quintman, Kurtis Schaeffer, and Megan Hale Williams all delivered brilliant papers, although for various reasons decided not to put them forth for publication in this volume. Also, I cannot fail to single out Ashley Tate, one of our talented PhD students, whose work behind the scenes was instrumental for the conference's success.

Many thanks go to SBL Press for taking a chance on a rather unconventional volume. I was fortunate to have had the opportunity to begin the process with Ron Hock, who was deeply supportive of this project from the start, and to see it come to fruition under the careful editorial eye of Clare Rothschild. I am also grateful to Nicole Tilford and her colleagues at SBL Press for their skillful and patient work bringing this volume to print. Finally, I sincerely thank another of our gifted PhD students, Jeannie Sellick, for her many hours of bibliographic work.

It seems entirely appropriate to finish by thanking Harry Gamble, whose work and career we celebrate in this volume. Harry was the first person with whom I spoke during my interview process at the University of Virginia, and from that time on it was a consistent pleasure having the opportunity to work and teach alongside him until his well-deserved retirement in 2014. For a young scholar of early Christianity, it is difficult to imagine a more ideal pair of senior colleagues than Harry and Judith Kovacs. In addition to being a scholar of great accomplishment and influence, Harry was a tireless advocate for the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Virginia, which he joined in its infancy in 1970. He devoted his forty-four-year career to this institution, founding the graduate program in Judaism and Christianity in Antiquity and serving for a staggering fourteen-year period as chair of Religious Studies, from 1992 to 2006. We present this volume to him in recognition and celebration of his long, rich, and productive years of service to the profession and to the wider scholarly community.
