

Becoming Human Together: The Pastoral Anthropology of St. Paul Toward Minority Biblical Criticism

By Jerome Murphy-O'Connor

This classic work, now expanded and updated with a fifty-two-page Afterword, presents Paul's pastoral anthropology in terms of his own thought, not alien categories imposed upon him. After examining in part 1 the New Testament witness about Jesus the Christ to discover what humans can be and should be (anthropology), Murphy-O'Connor turns his attention in part 2 to the human condition within society: under sin; alienated from God and the world; and egocentric. Part 3 then discusses life in the body of Christ—the Christian community—as the authentic existence that overcomes egocentric alienation in the true freedom of the mind of Christ.

Jerome Murphy-O'Connor, O.P., has served as Professor of New Testament at the École Biblique et Archéologique Française in Jerusalem since 1972. He is the author of many books on Paul, including Paul: A Critical Life (1998); St. Paul's Corinth: Texts and Archaeology (2002); and Paul: His Story (2006).
