“Jewish history unfolds in the present. Refuting mythology, it affects our life and our role in society. Jupiter is a symbol, but Isaiah is a voice, a conscience. Mars died without ever having lived, but Moses remains a living figure. The calls he issued long ago to a people casting off its bonds reverberate to this day and we are bound by his Law. Were it not for his memory, which encompasses us all, the Jew would not be Jewish, or more precisely, he would have ceased to exist.”

—Elie Wiesel, Preface to Messengers of God, 1976

“I think Judaism is a memory religion par excellence. . . . We have about four thousand years of history to remember. And what you are really bidden to do as an intelligent Jew is to remember and incorporate that history into your essential being. The biblical images of Abraham and Jacob are real. The story of the binding of Isaac is real. The story of Joseph is real. The story of David and Solomon, that’s a real story. It all becomes a part of the way you think about the world. . . . What Judaism wants Jews to do is to map the world with certain kinds of information. And that information consists of the value systems, the tensions, the successes and failures, the dreams and the terrors of the Jewish past.”

—Chaim Potok, Interview with Mars Hill Review, 1997

“The overriding aim of the biblical writers was to present a theological, or theocentric, didactic description of events. That is, these authors were intent on producing historiosophy rather than historiography. Animated by the unshakable conviction that divine sovereignty purposefully operates and controls human events, the biblical writers were not consciously composing mere historical records but rather documents of faith.”

—Nahum Sarna, Foreword to Exploring Exodus

Description: This course is designed as an introduction to the Torah of the Hebrew Bible, comprising Genesis-Deuteronomy.

Objectives

(1) To see the various ways in which biblical literature can and has been read in different settings.
(2) To understand both the literary and religious layers of meaning(s) in these stories, i.e., to gain an appreciation for how these stories function as scripture as well as edificatory narratives.

(3) To gain an appreciation of the narrative art in the Hebrew Bible, as well as to recognize that many of these stories are culturally familiar and as such deserve to be read in their original context.

(4) To develop your own view(s) of the subject matter through reading primary and secondary sources, in-class discussion, and independent research.

Requirements: This course has four basic requirements and a total of 450 possible points:

(1) Regular class attendance and participation are a must, and thus will account for 50 possible points toward your grade. By class participation, I mean both asking/answering questions and making relevant comments in the context of our in-class discussion. Roll will be taken every class session; if you are not present during the taking of attendance, you will be counted absent unless you speak with me that Session. If you are absent 3 (three) or more classes your grade will be lowered by one letter grade; if you are absent 5 (five) or more classes you will fail the course.

(2) Completion of the primary and secondary readings prior to class goes hand in hand with class participation, and thus is as important. I also expect you to bring any and all readings to class with you on the days we’re scheduled to discuss it.

(3) We will have two short in-class quizzes, each worth 100 points toward your final grade. Quiz One will be given on October 17th (Session 11), and Quiz Two will be on November 16th (Session 20).

(4) You will write an essay that will be 6-8 (1800-2400 words) pages long. First, you will submit a paper proposal containing a thesis, argumentative plan, and proposed sources, which will be due on October 3rd (Session 7). Each student will be required to discuss these proposals with me prior to approval. Following approval, you will write a rough draft based on your proposal that will be due on October 26th (Session 14). I will evaluate these drafts and return them to you with comments and suggestions for improvements. You will then write a final draft of the essay based on my feedback. The final draft will be due by noon in my office on November 21st. Formal instructions and sample topics for this paper can be found online at BlackBoard. Both versions of the essay will be worth 100 possible points toward your final grade. Note: A good guide on how to write academic papers can be found at http://www.mdx.ac.uk/www/study/Gloess.htm.
Additional Course Information

(1) No incompletes will be given unless the student contacts me well in advance of the end of the quarter. The circumstances must include serious medical problems or other extreme difficulties.

(2) All requests for special accommodations, e.g., medical, athletic, or learning-related, must be presented to me the first day of class. All such requests must be accompanied by the appropriate paperwork to be considered.

(3) No absences will be excused except in the cases of (a) an emergent medical situation or severe illness; or (b) a death in the student’s immediate family.

(4) Upon matriculation, all students implicitly agree to abide by the University’s Academic Honor Code. Any violations of that code in our class will be taken very seriously. If I find evidence that you’ve violated the Honor Code, either intentionally or unintentionally, you will either (a) receive no credit for the assignment in question; or (b) be expelled from the class and assigned a failing grade for the course. In extreme cases, you may also be reported to the appropriate authorities on campus for further review.

FERPA Information

According to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA), also known as the Buckley Amendment, information concerning grades and other student information may only be disseminated if the professor or institution has a signed release from the student in question, or if the student requests the information in person. Requests for information via telephone or email without the aforementioned release will not be granted.
